P&G products with styrene: P&G publishes a fragrance palette on their website which includes fragrance ingredients for all the products they make, including cosmetics and personal care. P&G perfumers choose from this palette when formulating their fragrances. Although P&G insists their perfumes are formulated “with the greatest care and utmost attention to safety,” you can see Styrene – a known human carcinogen – is listed as one of their approved fragrance chemicals. Unlike other ingredients in cosmetics, fragrance chemicals are not required to be disclosed on the label so consumers have no way of knowing they’re there, or avoiding them. As a result “Fragrance”—that single word on a label can contain dozens of chemicals, some of which, like styrene, should be avoided. Here’s the link to their fragrance palette with styrene listed:
